Any note you play sounds a major second lower than written – an “A” played on the Trumpet would sound “G”. Let’s take another instrument. A “C” played on an Alto Saxophone in Eb will actually sound an “E flat” a major sixth below. All subsequent notes played on the Alto Saxophone sound a major sixth lower than written.

A multi-instrumentalist is a musician who plays two or more musical instruments at a professional level of proficiency.. Also known as doubling, the practice allows greater ensemble flexibility and more efficient employment of musicians, where a particular instrument may be employed only briefly or sporadically during a performance. Doubling is not uncommon in orchestra (e.g., flutists who ...
