Ethics Baruch Spinoza

Ethics, Demonstrated in Geometrical Order, usually known as the Ethics, is a philosophical treatise written in Latin by Benedictus de Spinoza. It was written between 1661 and 1675 and was first published posthumously in 1677. The book is perhaps the most ambitious attempt to apply the method of Euclid in philosophy. Spinoza puts forward a small number of definitions and axioms from which he attempts to derive hundreds of propositions and corollaries, such as "When the Mind imagines its own lack Baruch Spinoza, "Human Beings are Determined". Abstract: Baruch Spinoza argues against the doctrine of free will as a result of demonstrating that the activity of our minds is equivalent to the activity of our bodies. The mind is more or less active (or contemplative) in accordance with the body's activity or sensing.

Spinoza's best-known work is his Ethics. Also influential is his pseudonymously published Theological-Political Treatise, which one critic characterized as "a book forged in hell by the devil himself." In the Treatise, Spinoza starkly criticizes the role of religion in politics and calls for a secular, democratic form of government.
