Mike brought New Yorkers together to achieve bold progress as mayor. He will unite Americans as president and get big things done. Mike led the nation's largest city through the 9/11 recovery and Hurricane Sandy. Unlike Donald Trump, who has brought chaos to the White House, Mike knows how to manage a crisis. Mike fights for what's right.

To me, "Get it done" indicates either having someone else do it or causing something to be accomplished. For example, if you are in a business meeting and the CEO says, "I don't care what you do, just get it done," she is stating that you can do it or you can get someone else to do it - as long as whatever "it" is gets accomplished, the method ...

1. Ask yourself six things that you want/must to get done by the end of the day. Make sure they are important, not just urgent. 2. If you are a motivated type person, list your hardest task first. The rest of the day will just get easier. 3. If you find it hard to get going, register an easy task first. Do it first thing.

But as I've mentioned, planning to do something doesn't mean you'll actually get it done. You can have all the tools in the world to help you prepare, but it won't matter if you always fall short of actually completing what you plan. I've come to find that the tools for doing are quite different from the tools for planning.

Thanks so much for sharing and for bringing to light that we can GET IT DONE. we just have to DO IT. Lolly. Reply. frank sonnenberg says. September 17, 2014 at 12:32 pm. You're right Lolly. Attitude is important. As you say, "It makes the difficult possible." It also makes a tough job bearable. It's not enough to make it to the finish line.
