For room measurements, REW is adequate for non-pros (and even some pros). For crossover design, I am not sure REW is quite on par with ARTA or HOLM, but I haven't tried using it for that. I think V5 is getting close. Anyway you cut it, REW is newb simple, free and very effective. Use it until you need something more.

(REW sometimes generates filters with higher Q than they need to be, and manually forcing a lower Q can result in a simpler EQ.) Change a filter to a shelving filter (type LS or HS). This adjusts the level of all frequencies above or below the set frequency. (REW is not able to use shelving filters in its auto-EQ.)
